

March 28, 2005

NEW YORK: Cold temperatures and intermittent snow events across the state during the first two weeks of March delayed the start of spring land preparation by producers. Warmer temperatures and melting snow during the end of the month increased flood potential. Many fields were still too wet to support machinery. Maple producers have experienced below average sap flows due to adverse weather conditions.